 - Is it proposing novel ideas and approaches?
 - Does the application test a hypothesis?
- Formatting & completeness of application
 - Did you submit by the deadline?
 - Did you follow the instructions diligently?
 - Are all required materials included?
 - If reworking a previous non-AAOF application:
 - Reformat to the AAOF guidelines

Where Do Applicants Trip Up

 - Are you eligible for the category for which you have applied?
 - Is this the category in which you are most competitive?
- Accomplishments from prior funding
 - Did you achieve the goals of your previous funding?
 - Have you filed your reports with the AAOF?

Where Do Applicants Trip Up

- Mentorship & Consultants
 - Important to seek
 - Strong, relevant mentors/consultants
 - Input early and often
- Mentors/Consultants
 - Need to review application and provide input to ensure
 - Application is correctly written and compiled
 - Research question is strong and current

Best Practices

- Start 6 months prior to submission
- Awards Materials typically posted by July 1
 - www.aaofoundation.net
- Research: Define excellent & novel

The Future

- Continue building on
 - Quality of applications
 - Discoveries in orthodontics
 - Faculty development successes
 - New processes for identifying Calls for Proposals

Looking for Novel Projects

- AAOF would like to fund more “novel” Research and Development projects
 - Over the years development has been slow
 - Machine learning (ML) is on the rise and should be explored
 - With the aid of ML, instruments can report on intraoral conditions such as, periodontal changes, soft tissue compliance and behavior, appliance malfunctions, in addition to somatic growth status with comparisons to initial diagnosis, and planned treatment mechanics
 - Artificial Intelligence (AI) can work together with ML
 - AI-facilitated planning for qualitative treatment mechanics in 3D is possible while ML could “qualitatively” assess the conditions the patient presents, and to design the mechanotherapy
 - Could be instrumental in doing marketing, based on patients’ persona and preferences for behavior, services and esthetics
